GREAT REVOLUTION IN WASHING.
(GREAT SAVING).

Extract from The Christian Globe, June 21st, 1877.
WE have just read of a soap which would have been invaluable in the days of Fergus O'Connor, who was wont to address the readers of his Chartists paper as "The Great Unwashed." The term was not complimentary, though it was literally true. From a patriotic point of view it seems almost a pity that Mr. Luticke, of 12 Mark-lane, was not then as he is now, sole agent for the new "Cold Water, Self-washing Soap," which effects more wonders with about a hundred per cent. less trouble and expense than all the Turkish baths that were ever invented, against which latter, be it understood, we are not saying a disparaging word. Cleanliness, we are told, is next to Godliness, and there is a good deal of truth in the saying. In fact every day people are growing more and more alive to the importance of strict attention to sanitary arrangements. Now according to all accounts, the soap we are alluding to possesses almost miraculous qualities. Henceforth the washing day, that bête noir of pater familias, that bane of domestic felicity, will have to be obliterated from amongst the not red-letter days of the calendar. By the aid of this soap all the washing can be done without boiling, without wash boards, hot water, washing powders, and even soda! And all this with scarcely any labour. But we have not yet exhausted its merits. It revives the colours of shintzes, carpets, and other articles of drapery in general use for house decoration (eye, and the colour of pale, comely faces too), and, better than all, it will not injure even the most delicate of delicate fabrics. We would just say one word more, namely, that we have tried this soap, and can therefore vouch for the accuracy of the foregoing description. Time, of course, in these busy days, is money; and so is labour; and for this reason we would recommend our readers to send three stamps to Mr. Luticke, at 12, Mark-lane, E.C., from whom they will receive gratis and post-paid half a pound of this magical composition. We are mistaken if their next order is not for half a hundredweight.
W. GARDNER, Agent, Chemist Bank, Barnard Castle.
